0955392861, 9780955392863, Brambleby Books, 2010

This powerful, thought provoking collection of 61 poems, whilst primarily concerning people - human awareness, desire, love and sex, and awareness of beauty and its loss - also embraces big contemporary issues, social and environmental. Written in an elegant and forceful style, the author has the breadth of mind to make us think deeply about ourselves and our place in the world. Hence, although he, like us, is but one of the many - one under the sun - his is clearly an impelling voice. This book is for anyone and everyone who loves life in all its variety, uncertainty, including the bright lights as well as the darkest of darkness. Vincent Spada was born in 1976 and currently lives in Massachusetts. He is the author of a wide range of poetry and prose. This is his first published collection of poetry.
